REPORT OF THE DIRECTOR

This is a simply produced Annual Report which tells the Academy story for 1972 without frills. There are no impressive pictures of Mom and Dad and the child in the backpack looking at American masterpieces or shots of the smiling Director cutting ribbons. Expensive reflections of past accomplishments are not important now. Hopefully, you will visit the Academy to see it in person and support the programs and future this report foretells.

1972 will be considered the year in which the importance of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts as a national institution was recognized and confirmed and programs and activities were initiated to build on its greatness. To assist us in achieving a proper perspective of the Academy's role as an outstanding American art institution, Dr. John Coolidge, Mr. Wendell Garrett, Mr. Eugene W. Leake, Jr., Mr. Howard Lipman, Mr. Richard Lippold, Dr. Jules David Prown and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller 3rd graciously accepted an invitation to visit the Academy from April 20th through the 23rd to comment on the Academy after becoming familiar with its school, museum and collection and the Academy's great Furness building at Broad and Cherry Streets, as well as the Peale House at 1811 Chestnut Street.

The consultants were introduced to the school by Mr. Hotz and student guides, to the collection by Mr. Goodyear and to the Academy building by Mr. Hyman Myers, a Philadelphia architect and Furness scholar. In addition, they visited the Philadelphia Museum of Art, Independence National Historical Park and the Historical Society of Pennsylvania to observe activities relating to the Academy's museum function.

The consultants submitted a written report to the Board and returned to present a verbal report on May 19th. The consultants recommended that the Academy's future should be built upon its past and that the historic functions of school, collection and exhibition should be maintained, strengthened and centered in the Academy's Furness building. Their primary concern was that the Academy's Furness building at Broad and Cherry Streets should be renovated and restored to its 1876 condition. Their written report concluded:

"It is our overwhelming impression that there is no other institution in our field comparable to the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts which has done so much for so long and yet has so great a capacity for future service."

The consultants' general recommendations were accepted as a guide for the future of the Academy by the Board at its meeting on June 21st. This commentary by the consultants, an outside group of concerned professionals, and the acceptance of their general criteria for future planning were turning points in the Academy's history.

A series of major activities during the year was initiated in January when the Academy celebrated the 75th anniversary of the founding of the Academy Fellowship at a gala party opening the Fellowship's exhibition on Friday evening, January 28th. The Fellowship was founded on April 19, 1897, following an invitation to prospective members issued by Robert Vonnoh.

Original officers included Thomas Anshutz, Cecilia Beaux, Hugh Breckenridge, Helen Henderson, Emily Sartain, John Sloan and Henry Thouron. The anniversary of the founding was documented with a history of the Fellowship prepared by Ethel Ashton, Librarian of the Academy.

Carla Marvin joined the Academy staff in January as Manager of the Sales Shop replacing Karen Footner. The final in a series of three free public concerts, produced by Vladimir Sokoloff and featuring violinist Orlando Cole, was presented on January 27th. John Alexander joined the staff on February 14th as Public Relations Director replacing Mrs. Samuel R. Shipley III.

"The Best from Two Great Collections," 15th and 16th century woodcuts and Hogarth prints, including all the Progress Series, was held at the Peale House Galleries during February and March. The exhibition, prepared by Dr. Richard S. Field and Ms. Harriet Morris of the Prints and Drawings Department of the Philadelphia Museum of Art, was composed of works from the print collections of the Academy and the Philadelphia Museum. This was the first in a series of exhibitions prepared by the Prints and Drawings Department and presented at the Academy in accordance with the original agreement in 1956 when the Academy's print collection was placed on deposit at the Philadelphia Museum.

Early in 1972, Joseph Amarotico, Conservator of the Academy collection, began the conservation of the monumental painting "The Dead Man Revived by Touching the Bones of the Prophet Elisha" by Washington Allston, oil on canvas, 156" x 132", which was purchased by the Pennsylvania Academy in 1816 for $3,500. The conservation project was made into an exhibition in Gallery H and documented with an explanatory brochure and exhibition of the documents relating to the purchase, framing, delivery and original exhibition of the painting.

"A Salute to Franklin Watkins," an exhibition of thirty of his paintings selected by the artist, was presented in March to honor Mr. Watkins as a distinguished faculty member and member of the Board of the Pennsylvania Academy on the occasion of his receiving the 1972 Philadelphia Award. Mr. Watkins began his career with the Academy as a student in 1913 when the faculty included Daniel Garber, Henry McCarter and Emil Carlsen. Accepting the award, Mr. Watkins spoke fondly of his student days and reminisced about his teaching and his friendship with his great Academy teacher, Arthur B. Carles.

Memorial retrospective exhibitions for Walter Stuempfig and Allen Harris were held during March in the Academy galleries. These exhibitions were prepared and catalogued by Susan Cooley as her last assignment at the Academy before leaving to move to London. On Thursday, March 30th, Frances Vanderpool retired as Membership Assistant after 44 years of service. An exhibition of paintings by the distinguished Academy faculty member, Marshall Glasier, was held at the Peale House Galleries in March and April.

During the visit of the consultants in April, Dr. James O'Gorman, visiting Associate Professor of Fine Arts at Boston University and authority on the architecture of Frank Furness, spoke to the consultants and members of the Academy on the architecture of Furness and the Academy building. Members were invited to tour the building prior to Dr. O'Gorman's lecture. We were honored to have Mr. Louis I. Kahn as the principal speaker at Cresson Day exercises on May 3rd. Mr. Kahn is a friend of the Pennsylvania Academy whose relationship with this institution began when he was 17 and won prizes for paintings submitted to the Academy watercolor shows as a student at Central High School, Philadelphia.

Marjorie Ruben resigned as Exhibitions Advisor in April to devote more time to her work as a painter. We were pleased to have an exhibition of Mrs. Ruben's paintings at the Peale House Galleries during May, together with prints by Martha Zelt, a member of the Academy faculty.

The Academy family was saddened when Hobson Pittman died on May 5th. Mr. Pittman was one of the most influential faculty members in the Academy's history and generations of his students fondly remember his encouragement and inspiration. Mr. Pittman generously left a large bequest of his work to the Academy collection and bequeathed a special fund for a student prize to be known as the Hobson Pittman Memorial Prize.

In May the Peale House Exhibitions Committee was formed following the decision to make the galleries function as an exhibition center for artists who were not well known in Philadelphia and who might not have an opportunity to exhibit in commercial galleries or museums. The Peale House Galleries give the Academy an opportunity to continue its historic role of supporting contemporary art as a complement to the exhibition program at Broad and Cherry Streets primarily related to the Academy collection, the history of the school and the Academy's historic past.

Frank H. Goodyear, Jr. joined the staff on June 1st as the first Curator of the Academy collection since Thomas Birch was Keeper of the Academy in 1812. In a short time, Mr. Goodyear was able to organize "Acres of Art," an exhibition from the Academy collection which opened on June 21st and became one of the most popular exhibitions in several years. Both the staff and the public had an opportunity to see all those works in the collection which were more than five feet in one dimension, the primary criterion for the exhibition. The works displayed demonstrated the history of the Academy and, to a great extent, the connoisseurship of American art in Philadelphia. This exhibition was reviewed and commended by John Canaday in the New York Times. During 1972 over 30% of the Academy's permanent collection was exhibited.

In addition to the exhibitions in the Academy Galleries and the Peale House, special exhibitions were also presented in the lounge and dining area of the Peale Club. During the summer months, an exhibition of paintings by Arthur B. Carles, collected by the late David Bortin and loaned by Mrs. Bortin, Philadelphia, was held in the Peale Club Lounge. The Print Club presented an exhibition of the work of Philadelphia printmakers in the Peale Club dining area during the same period. In July the Peale House Galleries presented "Continental Pleasures," an exhibition of European paintings from the collection of the late Henry C. Gibson given to the Academy in 1896. The Academy and Peale House Galleries were closed in August.

From September 16th through October 22nd, "John Sloan in Philadelphia," the major exhibition in 1972, was presented in the Academy Galleries. The show was built upon the traveling exhibition originated and circulated by the National Gallery of Art. In 1892 John Sloan joined Thomas Anshutz' class at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts. Sloan belonged to a group of lively Academy students including Robert Henri, William Glackens, George Luks and Everett Shinn who later called themselves the "Philadelphia Realists." These five artists were part of the famous group known as "The Eight" who showed at the Macbeth Gallery in 1908 and immediately thereafter at the Pennsylvania Academy.

"John Sloan in Philadelphia" included a special exhibition on "The Eight" as well as paintings and documents relating to Sloan's Academy associates including Cecilia Beaux, Alexander Stirling Calder, William Merritt Chase, Colin Campbell Cooper, Charles Grafly, Maxfield Parrish, Edward Redfield, Walter Schofield and Bessie Potter Vonnoh. The exhibition would not have been possible without the great assistance of Mrs. John Sloan and the generosity of the Philadelphia Inquirer. As the invitation to the opening of the exhibition, members received a recording of an interview with Mrs. Sloan about her late husband. A gala dinner honoring Mrs. Sloan, attended by 336 guests, was held on Thursday, September 14. As part of an educational program related to the exhibition, Mrs. Sloan spoke on "Reminiscences of John Sloan" on September 19th, Bennard B. Perlman spoke on "John Sloan and The Eight" on October 3rd and E. John Bullard spoke on "John Sloan and the Philadelphia School of Illustrators" on October 17th.

During the year, a volunteer group of 19 docents was organized with Mrs. Emory T. L. Eysmans as Chairman. The Academy's educational programs were greatly augmented by this volunteer group which has given tours and provided an information desk at the Academy.

On September 14th the Peale House Galleries presented separate one-man exhibitions of paintings by James Phillips and Ellsworth Ausby, two young New York City painters. This was the first exhibition planned by the Peale House Exhibitions Committee and was followed by exhibitions of paintings by Elaine Galen, Hampton, New Jersey, and Stefano Cusumano, New York City. The final exhibition for 1972 in the Peale House Galleries was carved panels by Elijah Pierce, Columbus, Ohio, and paintings by Justin McCarthy, Hazleton, Pennsylvania. These two octagenarian, untrained artists honored us by attending the opening.

The last exhibition in the Academy Galleries during 1972 was the exhibition of paintings by Albert Bierstadt organized by the Amon Carter Museum of Western Art, Fort Worth, Texas and supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. For both the Sloan and Bierstadt exhibitions, we offered recorded Acoustiguide tours of the exhibitions. Through the assistance of Mr. Edmund Bacon, the Academy borrowed "Mount Whitney" by Bierstadt on an annual renewable basis from the Rockwell Foundation, Corning, New York.

In September, with the guidance of the Philadelphia artist and designer Sam Maitin, we began work on an Academy calendar for 1973, the first illustrated publication about the Pennsylvania Academy in its 167-year history. 5,000 copies were published and all but a small archival group were distributed.

In September the Board and staff began a fund-raising effort to solicit patrons to make individual gifts of $1,000 or more toward a fund to finance the early planning and preliminary studies of the renovation and restoration of the Academy's Furness building. The success of this effort was celebrated on December 8th, the day following the 100th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of the Academy building, at a gala dinner to thank 92 Cornerstone Patrons.

On December 4th Franklin Chenault Watkins died in Bologna, Italy. The Academy's great respect for Mr. Watkins was expressed in 1949 when he was presented with the Academy's highest award, the Gold Medal of Honor. His death marked the end of an era at the Academy and he will be missed by all who knew him as a teacher, friend and artist. To commemorate his deep concern and compassion for the student artist, the Franklin Watkins Memorial Fund has been established to provide awards to students for expenses other than tuition.

With the increased attention to American art and a renewed awareness of the primary role the Academy has played in the history of American art, the importance of this venerable institution is clearly apparent. With an art school unsurpassed in its service to American artists and dedication to the European tradition of study from the life model, a collection of American art ranking among the best in the country and unsurpassed in its percentage of masterworks, an active exhibition program devoting continuous attention to both the 19th and 20th centuries, the Academy continues to function as originally conceived December 26, 1805 with the added distinction of being centered in a monument of 19th century American architecture by the Philadelphia architect, Frank Furness. No institution in the country has the potential to contribute in so many ways to our artistic life.

As many of you know, I will be leaving the Academy in September 1973. It is my sincere hope that those of you who have begun to support the Academy will be encouraged by what has been initiated in the past year and will continue to strengthen and build this great Philadelphia institution which, more than any other, represents the foundation of American art.

SCHOOL

The 1971-72 School Year was characterized by full enrollment in the day, evening and summer schools. The number of students accepted for the day school exceeded the normal capacity and resulted in the decision of the Faculty and the Committee on Instruction to raise admission standards. Tuition rates were maintained at the same level as the 1970-71 School Year.

Our day school again attracted the mature student, as well as representatives from several states and foreign countries. 55% of the students came to the Academy with art school or college experience beyond high school. Representatives from nine foreign countries and twenty-one states were included in the 1972 school body.

In addition to our association with the Philadelphia College of Art whereby Academy students may be awarded their B.F.A. Degree, we have associated ourselves with St. Louis University. This association provides a full year of credit toward the University's Bachelor's Degree for a few of their talented students who are chosen to attend P.A.F.A. for their junior or senior years.

In April, a group of consultants, prominent in the arts field, visited the Academy at the invitation of the Director and the Board. This evaluation of the Academy's strength and weaknesses included the following remarks: "In accordance with the original concepts of the Academy, it seems that the size and guiding concepts of the School should be preserved. . . . We feel that the School should definitely not be removed from the Academy building, but that adjacent facilities should be obtained. . . . All seven of us felt that the School is structured properly and acting in the proper spirit to do an excellent job. Agreement on this point is quite unusual and we believe the circumstances are unique."

Through the efforts of the Committee on Development, the School was awarded a grant of $15,000 by the Dolfinger-McMahon Foundation "to introduce a new policy making it possible for first-year students of demonstrated talent and economic disadvantage to secure financial help toward their tuition and necessary art supplies."

The Faculty, students and staff were saddened by the death in May of Hobson Pittman, a teacher at the Academy for twenty-three years. Mr. Pittman had been unable to teach for most of the year, and Leon Kelly worked with his students during his absence.

The exhibition of student works in competition for European traveling scholarships and other prizes was opened with exercises on May 3 to announce the winners. Mr. Louis I. Kahn, internationally known architect and friend of the Academy, was the guest speaker. The total value of all prizes awarded was $39,485. The exhibition attracted a large number of visitors and resulted in sales of student works in the amount of $7,925.

REPORT OF CURATOR

1972 has been an energetic and productive year in the Academy's Museum. It has been a year in which our exhibitions have focused on revealing the excellence and depth of this great collection of American paintings and sculpture and celebrating the work of distinguished alumni of the Academy's School. Such an exhibition policy will continue with equal stamina in the future.

Our conservation program under the able hand of Joseph Amarotico has continued to assure that our legacy in paintings is safeguarded for the future.

Preceding my arrival in June, the Academy was fortunate to employ the capable services of Susan Cooley, Curator, who organized the successful exhibitions, "Counterpoint," "Paul Wescott Memorial Exhibition," "Walter Stuempfig Memorial Exhibition" and "Allen Harris Retrospective."

Since June the Academy has staged three exhibitions that attracted national recognition. "Acres of Art" brought together over 130 monumental paintings and sculpture from our Permanent Collection, including many items which had not been viewed for years. John Canaday, art critic of the New York Times, was unstinting in his praise of the exhibition, calling it "a complete fascinator." Equally successful was the "John Sloan in Philadelphia" exhibition which was the major exhibit of 1972. It would not have been possible without the generous assistance of Helen Farr Sloan, the artist's widow. A major retrospective of the work of the late 19th century American romantic landscape painter, Albert Bierstadt, capped our exhibition activities for the year.

These events could not have been possible without the diligent assistance of the entire staff of the Academy which is dedicated to establishing our Museum as a dominant force in the study and presentation of American art.

WOMEN'S COMMITTEE

Many things were accomplished during 1972, with many of our members actively engaged.

Mrs. Randolph, in whose capable hands the Committee had functioned for two years, turned over the gavel to me in May. She, along with Mmes. Gribbel, Stimson, Greenfield and Townsend, rewrote our bylaws, establishing an associate membership, and audited our books. Mrs. Avery Clark was appointed Corresponding Secretary.

The final concert in February by Dr. Vladimir Sokoloff and Orlando Cole attracted a large audience. At a party given by Mrs. Randolph, Dr. Sokoloff was presented with a check for $150 donated by Mrs. Alfred Bendiner.

The Fair at the Brandywine Museum in May was fairly well attended. "There was a festive feeling throughout the day" and the project "engendered an esprit de corps" among the entire Women's Committee. Unfortunately, the affair netted only $2,464.70.

Peale Club openings, arranged by Mrs. David Grossman, were hosted by the committee for Marjorie Ruben, Martha Zelt Stanton and Marshall Glasier.

The Student Activities Committee, ably led by Mmes. Kaufmann and Peck, arranged the annual School opening luncheon in the student lounge at the Peale House. 356 students enjoyed a delicious lunch prepared by James Lulias and his staff. Four student gallery openings during the spring and fall were also hosted by this group.

The Art Safari to London and Portugal was immensely enjoyed by 57 people, 11 of whom are members of the Committee and the P.A.F.A. Board of Directors. The Committee also arranged the benefit performance of "Man of LaMancha" on December 14. A sponsors' dinner for 200 was held at the Peale Club prior to the theater performance. Profits from the safari and film benefit amounted to approximately $5,000.

Mrs. Shipley represented the Committee at the Sloan Dinner at the Academy. Mmes. Sinkler and Gribbel very kindly donated the liquor and floral decorations for the dinner. Mrs. John Sloan remarked that the Sloan exhibit was "the finest anywhere in the U.S.," a worthy compliment to Tom Armstrong and his staff.

Mrs. and Mrs. C. Earle Miller contributed $1,000 and Mrs. Herbert C. Morris $500 to be used for student activities.

Women's Committee contributions during the year:

4 student grants .....	$1,980
student easels and lighting .....	1,700
enlargement of graphic area and reconditioning of lithograph stones .....	775
special aid to student .....	200
student tickets for Sloan lectures .....	250
cornerstone dinner .....	1,500
student parties and school opening lunch .....	400
Franklin Watkins Memorial Fund .....	500

Our meeting room at the Academy was repainted, and much has been accomplished in getting our files in order and up-to-date. We express much gratitude to Betty Fermanis, Membership Director, for her efforts in helping us accomplish this important task.

Mmes. Preucel, O'Malley, Shipley III, Stevenson III, Kingman and Mather III became members of the Committee during the year. Mrs. John Newbold has returned to active membership and has been appointed Chairman of our Nominating Committee. Mrs. Bette Ferguson was appointed secretary, replacing Mrs. Carol Widing who moved out of state. Mrs. H. Richard Dietrich resigned from the Committee.

A deep sadness was felt by the Committee over the death of Franklin Watkins, and we wish to pay tribute to him as a great artist. This is a severe loss to all of P.A.F.A. It is gratifying to know that Mrs. Watkins will continue to give us her help and support.
